YURI'S GREAT DAY

WT is Yuri Gagarin's great day, no one clac's. Months ago Russia demonstrated the scientific fact that she could put a spaceship capable of carrying a man into orbit - and bring it back. That was the triumph of science and the state. But today the man who answered "Yes" is greater than the "Are you ready?"

The achievement of being hurled into the great unknown will rank as the most spectacular pioneer-. ing effort of mankind. It was greater than the aeroplane, greater than Stevenson with his locomotive, greater than Nicolas Cugnot with his first steam car in 1770, greater than Columbus, Vasco da Gama, Captain Cook, Captain Scott, Amundsen or Hillary who each in his time came face to face with the same element of tense, bodyemptying, fate-tempting uncertainty, and conquered it.

AGARIN'S experience in I that respect at least was not new. Hundreds who have gone before him on some per second. terrestial epic which lives today in history, have done so knowing less of their unknown than the first "cosmonnut." This is not to belittle his achievement in any way and we are sure that a man of Gagarin's him. sense of mission would acknowledge that though he | magnificent." may rank as the first among equals, science had blazed as smooth a highway into the sky as any astronaut could wish. Risks there were and possibly tragedies too before Gaganin's first flight, but this is true of every new pioneering ven-

Forty years from now, it may all seem as remote and perhaps as faintly amusing as the old fashioned plane and car do to us today. Where mankind goes from here in the space age, of which this is the Year One, and how he utilises and applies his knowledge is for the future. Space travel and flights to our own or other solar systems are headlines for another day.

For while the humble earthbound beings of this world can only stare in bewildered amazement while science and specimens of near physically perfect humanity blaze fascinating trails in a dark and uncertain void. must not allow this to blind us to the greatest . task before us: to build a better, happier and more prosperous world for the three thousand million will live and die with their feet planted firmly on the ground.

Notwithstanding this, it is fair to say today that most who have read the story of the first real space flight will have been moved and exhilarated by the achievement - whether we see it in the simple terms of an amazing human drama, or time today, an one of the most brilliant and extraordinary feats of acience. Moscow, Apr. 12. state which asked him Moscow went wild today in a huge triumphant parade for 27-year-old Yuri Alexievich Gagarin, the ex-plastic moulder who pioneered man's flight into space.

Wright Brothers with their As his mother prayed in a church outside Moscow the young man who hated heights hurtled around the earth 200 miles high at 18,000

> I wouldn't have swapped my day in Moscow for anyone. It was like sitting at the ringside of history as a new age of man's ndventure was rung up.

> Gargarin was dressed in a sky blue pilot's uniform. He wore a special helmet with peak.

> After blast off he signalled launching team, "I see earth pelow me and it is covered with smoke." A few minutes later he was listening to teams on earth with a background of music from Moscow, including his favourite tune-"The Waves of Love."

> Now he was weightless as the big ship moved into orbit around the earth. He was travelling 200 kilometres high at eight kilometres

His voice came through loud and clear, "Everything's okay."

A doctor stood by the landing point in a helicopter in case he was needed, but it was a perfect landing. Yuri didn't ever appear dizzy as he leaped from the cabin. He grabbed another astronaut who met him in such an embrace that he gasped.

Other members of the astronaut team embraced and kissed

This is how he described man's first sight of the heavens, "The sky is quite black. Earth is as blue as a pigeon. It's all Now the Russians are already planning new manned ventures into space. Very soon the Soviets will attempt to land on the moon, At midday today I joined a spontaneous, deliriously happy group parading along Moscow's main street chanting "Yuri Velinki" meaning George the Great.

Chanting adulation

Before the day was out thousands were chanting their adulation to "George the Great king of the untamed cosmos." Tonight Moscow loudspeakers were blaging out nows of the the Soviet feat to happy eclebrators repeatedly rereading Mi

Khrushchev's message to Yuri. For the first time in memory there was a special edition of Pravda tonight. It was a four-pager with a huge photograph of Gagarin and tonight Izvestia devoted its six pages exclusively to the news. Tonight in the Red Square to the strumming of balalaikas I danced for 15 minutes with 3,000 happy young Russians who sang "Moscow Nights,"

As a Red Army colonel walked across the square he was caught and tossed in the air three times by air cadets. He told me, "If the air force keeps doing things like this I don't mind how many times they throw me."

Extra police were on duty tonight to control the crowds but everything appears to be well ordered. However, there seems that there will be no end to the joy.

Moscow for some days has been full of rumours of the launching of an astronaut. Some very strong reports said that one went into orbit on Friday and had suffered during flight.
I was told by usually reliable Communist sources that he was under care of top space scientists and physicians. There is speculation among Western scientists here that NATICAN CITY: The Vatican City newspaper Observatore Romano said the flight was a memorable moment in history which did not disturb Catholic beliefs, but rather comforted them. Mr Raimondo Manzini, the newspaper's director, in a state-ment to be published inte today, said scientific progress reflected "the superior image of man as a spiritual creature endowed with liberty and reason, capable of a growing mastery of the exterior world, according to the divine commandment."

JOHANNESBURG: Morning newspapers in Johannesburg and Bloemfontein brought out special editions. The Johannesburg Star said: "The triumph is one in which mankind as a whole can take fully justified pride." "Have you heard . . . ?" was the question on everyone's livs as the news of the flight spread through Britain at breakfast

The official British reaction to the flight was that it was "a magnificent achievement," but one London evening newspaper said that behind the admiration there is "rueful soceptance" in the British Cabinet of the far-reaching implieshad not been steep. Output had descended "from the summit to the plateau." . Many Lancashire cotton men concede Hongkong has a case with its complaint that Britain bought big cotton cloth supplies from non-Commonwealth countries when last

THE MAY

WHEN it was found that the border between two boroughs ran slap through a house, it was ruled that the occupant's rates' must be divided equally between the two boroughs. Not long ago it was discovered that a very tall man was sleeping with his head and body in one borough and his feet in another. To avoid complications, he pushed his bed out of the first borough, and slept with his feet sticking through the window thus remaining entirely in one borough. But the rates second borough were raised, so he moved back and slept sideways in the first borough. The solution

Comment in Herald Tribune SIR WINSTON - NO GREATER MAN IN WORLD

The New York Herald Tribune commenting on Sir Winaton Churchill's visit to this city said in an editorial:-"This is an unusual visit that Sir Winston Churchill is making to New York today-entirely private without interviews or speeches without even an official welcome from the city. But Sir Winston wants it that way since he is just passing through so to speak on the yacht Christina prior to flying home to London.

"Of course we understand that Sir Winston whose life has been bestrewed with honours, accolades, salutes and encomiums should want a little rest from them. The role of being a great man can be a little wearing and if there's a greater man in the world today than Sir Winston Churchill, his name cludes us.

"So If he just wants to all on a ship at anchor in the Hudson River and smoke a cigar at the skyline that's all right with us. We're glad to have him near any time on any terms. So well just say it quietly lest any one should overhear 'welcome Winnie.' " -China Mail Special.

England's attack can sink the Scots on Saturday

BY IVOR YORKE

What chance do Scotland's footballers stand of breaking a triumphant England run of four successes this season? Or - much nearer and dearer to the Scottish heart-what chance have they of ending nine barren years without a victory over the Auld Enemy?

The answer to both questions will be settled in Wembley's vast grey stadium on Saturday, when soccer's oldest international opponents clash for the 78th time.

It is also nine years since they were outright international champions, though they have shared the title on three occasions since then.

Six changes

The Scots go into this game knowing that victory can again give them a share in the championship despite mixed fortunes this season

They played poorly against Wates, losing 2-0, and were then 5-2 victors over one of the weakest Irish sides ever fielden. With six changes from the side which beat Ireland last of yet another success the Scots seem neater to solving their World

And though the Scots always manage to reserve their best performances for England at Wembley, there can be little doubt that they start second favourites.

Their big hope must be that centre-forward Ian St John will be able to upact England centre-half Peter Swan as he did Bill Slater last year. Inside-right Denis Law would then have to keep England's

Decisive factor

In my mind today the accomplishment of the Grand Slam assumes more importance as an example of the value of perseverance in the abstract than as a monument to skill in the playing of a game.

I am certain that in those moments when the success of the project was most in doubt, the decisive factor in each case had been my ability, summoned from somewhere, to keep conirel of myself and to keep try- should not have been coming as hard as I could, even when there was no clear indication of the direction in which the gressness of there improhope of victory might lie.

I hope the analogy will not appear too ridiculous, but it has been thinking along such a line that has I uncovered the only real regret I have ever had about quitting competitive golf when I was only twenty-eight years of age.

I have never been sorry that I did not try for a fifth Open or a sixth Amateur, for after adding one of either, there would always be the question of another.

What I have regretted at times was that I did not keep on until I might have schieved, in my own estimation at least the status of "Complet Golfer," to use Isaac Walton's spelling.

Weakness

Whatever lack others may have seen in me, the one I felt most was the absolute instillty to continue smoothly and with authority, to wrap up a championship after I had won command of it. # Adrift disabled trawler

Ten Formosa fishermen who were rescued by the Dutch liner Ruys after having been adrift for 13 days on board a disabled trawler, arrived in port early this morning.

The 32-ton trawler, Kum Chun Choi, left Formosa on March 27 for a fishing expedition west of Luzon.
